

BU Indian Head Cents, V Nickels In Change?

The story sounds like a collector's dream or a nightmare, yet it not only happened but is taking place right now!

The usual collector's complaint that it is impossible to assemble albums of Lincoln pennies or Jefferson nickels is commonly heard, and to some extent is justified.

Yet every day new finds of extremely desirable coins from change are announced in our press and that's what makes the search thrilling for collectors.

As fantastic as it may sound, however, right now in Northern New England UNC Indian Head cents and V nickels have been found in circulation.

First to appear were some common date Indian Head pennies in strict UNC condition; fortunately the specimens came into the hands of a numismatic-minded local merchant who immediately advised his local coin store of the treasure. The largest concentration seemed to be in dates between 1901 and 1908. The hunt was on!

Following the Indian Heads, a few weeks later appeared exquisite V nickels in strict UNC condition; the same pattern was followed, however, and the coin store remained supplied of these "surprise" gems.

Up to that time the identity of the source remained unknown. A few weeks later, however, the merchant was present in person when a man spent these coins for purchases. Being a small town, both men knew each other casually—and soon the key to the mystery was at least partially found.

Oh yes, it involves a little old lady! The man in question was running occasional errands for a widow neighbor of his, and sometimes, to supplement her budget, she would add a few of the old coins. The man had advised her to offer the coins for sale, which she stubbornly refused to do because: "she does not trust people, or was not certain she would get the right price." So rather than revealing her identity, she continues to spend the coins at face value.

House Group Votes To Drop Silver In Coins

If the House Banking and Currency Committee has their way, no silver at all will be in our new coinage. After a lengthy public hearing which included testimony from all silver-connected industries, the committee voted to eliminate even the White House-proposed 40 percent silver in half dollars.

The committee would further ban all silver cartwheel production for at least five years.

We shall keep PACE readership informed of further developments and outcome.

Independence Medal Release by the National Society

Featuring a composite scene of Adams, Jefferson, Hancock and Franklin at the signing ceremony, this unusual coin-medal was designed and sculptured by Erwin F. Springweiler. Mr. Springweiler is one of the "old masters" of medallic art who has joined the distinguished roster of medallic sculptors represented in the NCS series of contemporary numismatic masterpieces.

In accordance with the National Commemorative Society's standing rules, only one proof was struck in sterling silver for each NCS member, and a total of only three proofs were struck in solid platinum. Platinum proof No. 1 will be auctioned off in the near future for the benefit of the ANA National Home & Headquarters Program. Platinum proof No. 2 will be retained by NCS for special exhibitions. And, platform proof No. 3 will be presented to the Smithsonian Institution for the national archives. No other pieces will be struck and none will be offered for public sale.

Funny Money

An editorial by the publisher of THE NEW HAMPSHIRE SUN-DAY NEWS written in connection with the forthcoming coinage legislation which would eliminate silver from U. S. coinage.

Concerning his new "sandwich money" President Johnson wants "to make it absolutely clear that these changes in our coinage will have no effect on the purchasing power of the dollar." To clinch the matter he pledged that the new "cupronickel" quarters, dimes, and half dollars "will be exchangeable at full face value for the paper currency of the United States."

—Then what have you got?

—Presumably one of Mr. Johnson's new Federal Reserve dollar notes, which began last year to replace the time-honored "silver certificates."

—The value of the old silver certificate resided—or so people supposed—precisely in the fact that it could be exchanged by the bearer "on demand" for silver at the U.S. Treasury. Silver, like gold, has for some dozens of millennia been accounted a "precious metal" by all the world's nations, hence acceptable as money.

—Claiming to be "legal tender" the Fed's paper dollar is not worth the paper it is printed on, being nothing but a "greenback" pure and simple. It is not exchangeable for any metal, not even the cheap copper-nickel alloy in LBJ's new "sandwiches."

—Our grandfathers who thought paper money worthless unless fully convertible into metal,

Virgin Islands Of The United States

Its Coinage For The Collector

By Maurice M. Gould, F.R.N.S.

A group of Islands in the West Indies, commonly known as the Virgin Islands of the United States, and formerly the Danish West Indies, is situated as an outpost of the United States, in a position to furnish protection to the U.S. holdings in the Caribbean Sea and the Panama Canal.

Denmark colonized St. Thomas in 1666 and until 1755, the Danish West Indies controlled the Islands, but it was in this year that Frederick V of Denmark purchased the Islands from the company. St. Thomas was declared a free port in 1764 and in 1800, during the Napoleonic Wars, England blockaded St. Thomas and in the year 1801, occupied the Island.

In 1802, St. Thomas was returned to Denmark, but again from 1807 to 1815, England occupied the Danish West Indies.

In 1917, after negotiations which had begun prior to 1867, the United States purchased the Danish West Indies for $25,000,000.

The chief industries include fueling and servicing ships, manufacturing rum, fishing, cattle raising, and truck gardening. There is a large tourist industry which is growing by leaps and bounds.

High Demand

The coinage is of special interest to both foreign collectors and U.S. collectors alike and since the publishing of the book, "The Colonial Coinage of the U.S. Virgin Islands," by Whitman Publishing Company, in 1961, there has been an unprecedented demand for the coins and paper money in this series. Since the dramatic rise in prices a couple of years ago, prices have leveled off at the present time and there no doubt will again be another surge for the Danish West Indies coins, tokens, and paper money, partially due to the booming foreign market.

The Danish West India Company struck the first coins for the Islands, gold 2 ducat pieces dated 1708. These are very rare, only a few specimens being known.

Then in 1849, 2 ducat and 1 ducat gold pieces were minted. These pieces were not for general circulation and more on the idea of a commemorative or presentation piece and they are also considered rare.

Shortage

In 1734, a shortage of hard currency existed and King Christian VI gave permission to the Danish West India Company to have coins struck and coins in the denominations of 1 skilling, 2 skilling, and 12 skilling were minted in Copenhagen and then were shipped to the West Indies.

hagen and then were shipped to the West Indies.

Ships from many ports touched at the seaports in the area and many of the coins changed hands and were carried all over the world. This was a common phenomenon of the other West Indies Islands and seaports and in 1757, there was again a shortage of coins and coins were struck in the denominations of 12 skilling and a short time later, at the end of the reign of Frederick V, a new coinage of 12 and 24 skilling pieces was issued between 1763 and 1767.

A short time later, in 1782, the 6 and 12 skilling denominations were struck, but all bear the date 1767.

The coins struck from 1740 to 1767 are usually poorly struck and are very difficult to get in nice condition. Coins that are in "fine" or better condition are worthwhile obtaining for any collection, as they are both scarce in this condition and will appreciate in value through the years as only a few pieces are offered for sale in the top conditions.

Some of these coins were struck in base metal and these are also poorly struck so that the legend and other details do not show up clearly many times.

During the reign of Frederick VI, 1808 to 1839, 2 skilling, 10 skilling and 20 skilling coins were struck and the designs on these coins were continued until 1848. Many of these were melted down as during this period the price of silver took a sharp rise above the bullion value and just about everything available on the Island was melted.

New Strike

In 1848, Frederick VII authorized the striking of 2 skilling, 10 skilling, and 20 skilling pieces. All of the coins struck from 1816 to 1848 were well struck and these coins are obtainable in sharp condition and are known in uncirculated and proof condition.

It was also during this period that large amounts of foreign and U.S. coins were imported into the Islands and counterstamped with the famous Crown FR VII, which made them legal tender on the Island. These counterstamped pieces are very desirable, especially on the United States coins. The dollar size coins are the most valuable, with the large cent, in my opinion, being the most common.

With the new book due soon on the West Indies coinage by Ray Byrne, these counterstamps will have a great future and if any collector intends to obtain them, the time is now.

New System

A new monetary system began in 1849 and during this period, a one cent, three cent, five cent, ten cent, and twenty cent coinage were issued. These coins are still obtainable in very nice condition and prices are still very reasonable.

During 1905, coins were issued which had two denominations on them. The half-cent of 1905 is also marked "2½ bit." The one cent, "5 bit," the two cent, "10 bit" and the five cent, "25 bit," as well as the ten cent which was "50 bit." Most of these pieces are obtained fairly easily and are suggested for the beginner in forming a collection.

In great demand are the 4 daler and 10 daler gold of 1904 and 1905 and these pieces bring higher prices each time they are offered for sale or at auction.

Tokens

One of the most interesting collections that relates historically is the Merchants Tokens which were issued between 1888 and 1892.

Among the denominations that were used are the 1 centavo, 3, 5, and 10 centavo and the 1, 3, 5, and 10 cents. The reason for the use of the centavo denomination was that a great many Mexican pesos circulated on the Island and many of the pieces have the denomination with Mexic. beside it.

These pieces were struck in German silver, brass, and copper, and as I have seen many of them worn, no doubt actually circulated freely as currency. None of these are common and they are more difficult to obtain each year.

Whether a token collector or not, it would be wise to have a few of these pieces, along with a collection of the coins.

Paper Money

The paper money of the Danish West Indies is rare in all of the early issues and there is a 20 rigsdaler of 1788, West Indies currency credit note known, which is in the Royal Collection of Coins and Medals in Copenhagen. They also have a 5 rigsdaler note of 1822.

This type of note was issued from 1788 to 1836 in the following denominations: 5, 10, 20, 50, and 100 rigsdaler, and the condition of most of these notes known is Fair or Poor. There is a 100 rigsdaler note which was issued in 1842 on which the printing is more modern and this was also issued in the 5, 10, and 50 denominations.

In 1849, the Danish West Indian dollar was placed on a par with the U.S. dollar and some notes were issued in the $2, $3, $5, $10, $50 and $100 denominations and the same series issued a $2 note dated 1860, as well as 1898. A number of these pieces are obtainable in nice condition at reasonable prices, and are the least expensive of the Danish West Indies currency.

In 1905, the National Bank of the Danish West Indies issued notes in the denominations of 5 franc, 10, 20, and 100 francs. These notes are beautifully engraved, showing scenes from the Island, the obverse of the note also picturing the King. They are printed in both English and Danish and are gold certificates.

A local bank, the Bank of St. Thomas, issued notes from 1837 to 1889, until it finally went bankrupt in 1898. Most of these notes are difficult to obtain.

Price Hard

The popularity of this series will follow the same lines as that attained by Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Philippines and will continue to be in demand for many years to come. With approximately three hundred items to be obtained to complete a collection, either a type collection or general collection may be built up at the present time. It is difficult to manipulate prices in this series as very few dealers have an ample stock of this material and yet more and more dealers are trying to obtain and stock as many of these coins as possible because they are getting more and more calls for them.

For numismatic pleasure, and an excellent investment, I suggest the Colonial Coinage of the U.S. Virgin Islands.

The Readers Voice

Dear Sir:

I read with interest your coverage of the market each week but there are several aspects of the statistical coverage which are a bit hard to understand. In the eight graphs shown in the Market Pace, how do you arrive at the coordinates shown on the left of each graph? And on what basis were the items included in the graphical coverage picked? I would appreciate a detailed answer on this.

Very truly yours,
Perry Cheatham
Fort Worth, Texas

Dear Mr. Cheatham

Let us answer your last question first.

When the graphical coverage was initiated last year it was decided that we would pick a representative sample of rolls (or sets) in each denomination and report on the price progress of the sample.

Picking this sample was extremely difficult. (And statistically, since we are hunting only items which fulfill certain conditions, it is certainly not a random sample) We wanted items that were heavily traded so that fluctuations in the market, no matter how small, would show up week by week.

We also were forced to exclude a number of items

Her emissary is equally stubborn in not revealing her identity or whereabouts; so while partially solved, the mystery continues. He reports however that other denominations and old paper money remain in the hoard and will eventually find their way into circulation. Unbelievable? Yet it is true! But in order not to embarrass anyone, all we can say is that it happened in Northern New England.

In the same locality, a house belonging to an old woman declared legally incompetent by court order is now occupied by a business executive. He reports that in recent months his children "periodically show up with old greenbacks and gold certificates found in the attic."

The house is an old Colonial structure built around 1780 and is rented out furnished by a court-appointed trustee to the businessman who is wholly indifferent to coins or collecting. He simply limits himself to instruct his children "to return these papers where you found them!"

The sequel to the story? There is none — and the game continues with everybody in the town adopting a wait-and-see attitude, hoping good fortune will come their way.

Of course on this sort of subject myths abound. For example, during a recent Northern New England Coin Show it was reported that a coin dealer had acquired a bag of 1600 Indian Head pennies for $200 only minutes after the show opened. Allegedly, after having cast one glance on the contents he closed up shop and went home. Speculation was considerable as to the whys of his sudden departure. Soon, before the weekend was over, the bag allegedly contained $15,000 worth of Indian Heads, and the figure grew rapidly to which, though heavily traded, were still held by a small number of investors in sufficiently large quantity to present an inaccurate picture of market activity if these investors undertook any large marketing arrangement.

Two good examples of the above exclusion are the 1955-S dime and the 1955-P half dollar. Early last year, the S dime were held by several small groups in quantities ranging up to 100 bags in B. U. With a quantity such as this overhanging the market, there is no insurance against a price break. (which indeed took place this year when the price dropped from $60 to $38) The halves presented the same picture though orderly sales have held the price fairly stationary. (We might point out that distribution has greatly diminished the hoards of these two dates at this time.)

The third desire in picking a sample item was to include rolls in the same price range. It can easily be seen that if you use a $1,000 roll and a $20 roll, the latter can double in value while the former loses 2 per cent and the sum of the gain and loss is zero. We feel that this does not give a true picture of market activity.

You will note that we appear to violate this third requirement in a number of cases. (the 1949-P half, the 1950-D nickel, etc.) These rolls made the list in spite of their price differential because of their extremely heavy trading volume and/or popularity.

After a year, we look back at our picks and spot surprisingly few weaknesses. We feel that cents through half dollars and proof sets display an accurate picture of the market. On the other hand, trading in roll quantities of the issues used in the Morgan and Peace dollars series statistics is so low that the general levels shown, while accurate, are subject to large variations when sales and reported.

Speaking of the Morgan series, we were forced to choose between a sample of all $25 to $35 rolls or all $100 + rolls. We chose the latter. As most of you know, a graph of the cheaper rolls in this series would be a rather uninteresting straight line. But unhappily for us statisticians, all the volume is in the cheaper rolls.

In answer to your first question, each week we close out the detail prices of 461 issues included in our statistical coverage and the 81 issues not covered. The next step is counting up the advance-decline information and listing the coins that have shown the largest dollar change in each series.

We then post, to a series of ledger sheets, the bid prices of each issue included in the Space City Averages. (see the listing of included issues under each graph) On cents, for example, we total 20 issues while on proof sets, we total the bid prices of all issues from 1950 to date excluding the small date set (excluded due $20,000.

What happened really? The coin dealer in question had indeed acquired a bag of coins, but they were UNC Canadian pennies of recent vintage. Shortly after making the purchase the dealer was seized by a violent headache and indisposition and decided to leave the show. That's how the story started.—Myth vs. Reality!

Very real, however, is the following advice to coin hunters: Somewhere halfway between New Hampshire and Vermont right now is a merchant sitting on a bag of Indian Head pennies, some 2,000 of them in fact. He is as yet unspoiled by exorbitant prices or big expectations, yet he is just plain difficult to deal with. Why not try your luck . . . and happy hunting.

Funny money

would have howled derisively at LBJ's straight-faced assurance that his sandwich coins are OK because you can exchange them for paper! But Mr. Johnson says the fashion of believing that a coin's value can only be measured by the value of the precious metal it contains, belongs to "the early days of the Republic."

—The value of a coin today, he avers, depends entirely upon what the government chooses to stamp on its face!

—So why not use buttons for currency, or pinheads? An ordinary pinhead could be worth $1 million if so stamped, especially when bearing the further inscription: "In God We Trust." Magnifying glasses could be made available at the postoffice.

—The Wall Street Journal reports that despite Mr. Johnson's assurance the Treasury Department is worried about "public acceptance" of his tuppenny-ha'penny quarters and dimes. How much "sandwich money" will it take to buy a ham sandwich?

—The Treasury knows that the real "purchasing power" of money depends not upon government fiat but upon public confidence.

It is graphically portrayed as follows: The coordinates shown on the graph (the figures to the left of each small cut) are chosen to include all postings of totals for a period of 14 months. The time period is chosen to permit viewing of at least a year of past history. As an example, our 14 month range on proof sets has been $467.25 to $627.00 so the coordinates shown are $400 to $650.

Coinage Shift Will Not Affect Metals Situation

When currency possesses intrinsic value, i.e., can be exchanged for gold or silver public confidence is automatic.

—But when money is intrinsically worthless, like a paper dollar, or nearly so, like a cheap alloy coin, then public confidence must rest on something quite nebulous, such as the "full faith and credit of government" which means merely some gang of politicians in power at the moment.

—Examples are endless of governments, including our own, which shamelessly and without warning have broken their sworn, solemn, signed commitments to the public in matters monetary and fiscal.

—Yes, Grandpop would have hooted at the idea of coinage so sound it can be turned into paper but then Grandfather used to say, "be sure you don't take any wooden nickels," considering that idea a big fat joke.

—Any day now, wooden nickels may be expected to appear with the full backing of the administration. Since wood converts readily into paper this might set the whole economy back

1965 Lundy Proof

— Proof Puffins From the Island of Lundy —
Natural fortifications of the lonely island of Lundy, located out in the Bristol Channel has led its owners to champion their cause for freedom from the mainland. Since the days of pirates and invaders, this little impregnable rocky islet has a history of independence.

The 1929 Lundy Puffin coins are worthy of particular interest as the subject of the unique law case in which Martin Coles Harmon, the owner of Lundy, was prosecuted by the Director of Public Prosecutions for the unlawful coining of money in the value of one half penny, which is contrary to Section 5 of the Coinage Act of 1870.

The coins minted by M. C. Harmon depicted his profile and the date (1929) on the obverse, and a puffin and the words "Lundy One Puffin" on the reverse. There were several reasons which prompted M. C. Harmon to design and issue the coin. One being, "Lundy" itself, derived from the Old Norse or Scandinavian language, signifies "Lund" — a puffin, and the termination "y" — an island.

A new proof set commemorating the Fortieth Anniversary of the purchase of Lundy by Martin Coles Harmon, featuring the date 1965, has been struck, but is available only to a limited number of coin collectors, as the issue is strictly limited to 3000 Double Proof Sets.

A. P. Harmon, owner of Lundy, has commissioned the English firm of John Pinches, Ltd. to undertake the production of three thousand Double Proof sets. Mr. Leslie Pinches, designer of the new Churchill Gold Medal, personally prepared the dies for the Proof striking. This is of unusual historical importance as Pinches prepared and designed the engravings and original dies which were used by the Birmingham Mint for the pressing of the Puffin coins in 1929. For well over one-hundred years the Pinches family have been world famous as designers, engravers, and numismatic artisans. They are noted for receiving commissions covering the Coronation of Queen Victoria, King Edward VII, George V, George VI, and the Coronation of 1953.

To insure the high standards demanded by hobbyists collecting proof specimens, Mr. Harmon has secured the special collaboration of H. G. Stride, O.B.E., I.S.O. currently advisor to Thomas De La Rue, Ltd. on minting matters. Mr. Stride was for many years Chief Clerk of the Royal Mint. Mr. Stride has written "The Royal Mint" published for the Deputy Master and Comptroller of the Royal Mint by Her Majesty's Stationery Office and "The History of the Gold Sover-

Gourmet and Numismatist!

The numismatist-gourmet operating on a low budget is in for a treat while visiting the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

For one, this institution offers an excellent collection of Ancient coins to the roving collector's eye.

When hungry, the nu-mismatist can visit the basement restaurant operated by the Museum for visitors and a surprise awaits him. An exquisitely designed menu featuring ancient coins appears. The satisfaction to the eye of this attractive menu cover is only exceeded by the stomach's pleasure generated by the fine dishes offered there at most reasonable prices.

A little moral persuasion can incite the cashier to relinquish a copy of this menu cover, no doubt destined to become a collector's item.

After a prolonged absence, we again present the PACE single coin prices. These prices are obtained from a composite of newspaper advertisements, mail bid results, published price lists, and retail experience.

Since the last publication of these prices, the general market level has settled somewhat and this lack of buying shows up in the singles also. You will find that many of the late date singles have reduced prices. The only series to show substantial gains is the Walking Liberty halves. Some of these issues have doubled since the last printing of these quotations.

upon an even keel.

Government experts have advised Congress that silver for industrial uses will continue in short supply for a number of years even after it is eliminated from dimes and quarters.

However, the conversion to coins of copper and nickel will not put much added strain on supplies of those two metals.

The assistant secretary of the interior for mineral resources estimated that despite stepped-up exploration in recent months, U.S. silver production can't be expected to fill more than about one-third of industrial demands any time within the next five years. Silver imports, already declining will probably drop further in the years ahead, he said, necessitating further sales from the Government's silver stockpile to makers of silverware, film and other products.

Mr. Kelly contended that the Administration's coin conversion plans will greatly reduce the silver drain without "appreciably affecting" markets for copper and nickel. "Unlike silver, where coinage is the biggest factor in the supply gap, copper and nickel coinage requirements would be quite small relative to over-all production."

The coin changeover should cut the annual drain from the Government's one-billion-ounce silver stock to about 30 million ounces by 1967 from 300 million ounces last year, Mr. Kelly stated.

Meanwhile, Treasury Secretary Fowler, who only recently became involved in the coin crises, testified that he will rely on the Government's own stockpile, not on the open market, for copper needed in the proposed new "sandwich" coins to be made of cupronickel layers over a copper core. This was in answer to a question by Rep. Hanna (D., Calif.) of the Banking Committee, who wondered whether the Treasury might aggravate a rising price trend by obtaining copper for the coinage on the open market. The Secretary replied that the Mint's add-

Art As Financial News

DAUMIER AND HOGARTH

By DANIEL CAVANAGH

In May of 1944, the Navy ship I was aboard came through the Panama Canal from two years in the South Pacific and put into the Brooklyn Navy Yard for repairs for 30 days.

After a couple of weeks concentrating on the playing we had missed, most of us found time to extend our New York activities for brief periods into more cultural areas.

I wandered along Fifty Seventh Street one afternoon and saw some Daumier prints in a shop that had the name Walter Schatzki on its window. Mr. Schatzki was a delightful man. If you wanted to browse without anyone bothering you, you browsed. If you want help, you got it, whether it was a portfolio of engravings or information about an artist.

Mr. Schatzki was knowledgeable and articulate. We passed a pleasant hour and I walked out with ten Daumier prints. Some cost 50 cents each and a few cost 75 cents.

Made Fine Gifts

When I returned to my home in California after the war, I had the prints framed. I kept two of the Daumiers and gave away the other eight as birthday and Christmas gifts.

Last Saturday, a little more than 21 years after I made the purchase of the Daumier prints, I passed the shop of Walter Schatzki at 153 East Fifty Seventh Street in New York. There were Daumier prints in the window.

And inside, sure enough, was the same courteous gentleman.

"I would like," I said, "to see a portfolio of Daumier prints."

He cleared off a table where he had been cataloging prints and put out a big black folder.

The shop is a big one in a high rent area and Mr. Schatzki sells old and rare books and autographs as well as old prints.

All the other flat areas were in use by other customers looking at prints. I protested that I did not want to disturb him at his work.

Prices Increase

"I can do that anytime," he said softly, with a slight accent. "It is more important that you see the prints."

At the lower right hand corner of each print, the price was marked in pencil. The prints ranged from $4.50 to $10. Most of the

This is the first of our continuing series of articles on the financial appreciation potential in the field of art. These two stories were written by Daniel Cavanagh, a former Associated Press editor who is now in the finance business in New York.

They are valuable to anyone considering buying art for financial appreciation because one story tells how an extremely small purchase in prints increased more than 20 times and the other story contains sound basic advice on what to buy in the way of paintings.

THE FINDLAY GALLERIES

By DANIEL CAVANAGH

David B. Findlay has one of the finest art galleries in the United States. The Findlay Galleries at 11-13 East Fifty Seventh Street, New York, which were established in 1870, are currently showing French Master Paintings of the 19th and 20th centuries.

Mr. Findlay has reason to be proud of this group, which includes Degas, Dufy, Renoir, Monet, Picasso, Pissarro and Utrillo. The eye-catching picture of the lot, because of its size and colors, is Dufy's "Amphitrite" with a price tag on it of $130,000.

This is not the top price of the paintings. Works of Degas, Renoir and Bonnard are much, much more, Mr. Findlay said.

"Mr. Findlay," I explained, "I'd like to get from you some advice on pictures for their financial appreciation. The people who will be reading about our conversation want to know what they can buy that will increase in value and still give them pleasure in viewing."

ADVICE TO INVESTORS

"I don't really think of paintings for financial appreciation," he said, "but there's nothing wrong with that approach. Actually paintings are better buys than many other items I could name."

"There are some simple, basic rules to follow, and if your people will hold to these, I don't see how they can go wrong."

"In the first place, there are thousands and thousands of painters today, turning out thousands and thousands of paintings. A newcomer to the art field can only be confused if he tries to sort out from all these paintings what might increase in value with each passing year."

"Of course there's no problem with buying old masters, as long as the paintings are properly au-ones I saw were $7.50 and $10.

"I bought some of these from you in 1944 for 50 cents," I said.

"Seventy-five cents," he thenticated, but we're not talking about that now. We're concerned with the beginner in the field of art who might have $1,000 or $5,000 or maybe even $10,000 to spend on paintings.

WHAT TO BUY?

"So, among the thousands of paintings available to him today, what is he to choose? My recommendation is that he buy a well executed painting that he likes that has been painted by an established artist whose abilities have been recognized."

"There are lots of pictures by good men available today and the beginner can buy them from about $450 up. This is a good place to start."

"And I recommend one more thing, that the beginner seek the advice of a well-established art gallery to find the names of the painters who are also established and with rec-

Wengenroth Prints

A new set of lithographs by well-known Stow Wengenroth is being offered for sale by Goodspeed's.

The prints constitute beautiful studies of seashore and birds (sometimes combined) of the style and mood so characteristic of Wengenroth.

These prints are originals, done in black and white, with shadings of luminous greys, and they are signed by the artist. The edition is very small and individual runs do not exceed 80 copies. Measurements include margins and the vertical dimension is given first. Writes Norman L. Dodge: "Aesthetically it matters little where Mr. Wengenroth made his pictures, but we indicate the locality because in the past we have frequently been asked for it."

Subjects include:

Space City Averages:

HOW THEY ARE OBTAINED

With close to 1,500 separate statistics appearing each week in PACE, a need exists to express this information in graphic form for busy readers.

We are currently charting eight different coin series each week as you see below. These charts are based on Space City Averages, an arbitrarily chosen group of rolls which we feel are representative of the total for that series.

To be included in the Space City Averages rolls are chosen on the basis of three factors: (1) their trading is constant, (2) they are widely held, and (3) they are indicative of the series.

It is obvious infrequently traded items, closely held items, and extremes in the series would not serve this purpose.

Each week the statistical staff of PACE prepares these averages using information obtained from coin exchange transactions.

The amount expressed in the Space City averages is the total market bid prices for the rolls included in the averages. This is a dollar figure and is compared with previous week, month, and year figures for analysis.

The high and low for 1964 is also shown.

MARKET SUMMARY

JUNE 16, 1965

By Russell Brown

THIS week saw a number of declines and very few signs of strength in any of the series. New lows were scored by cents, nickels, dimes, half dollars and Morgan dollars. And declines exceeded advances by five to one.

In the Lincolns, there was a general selloff in the area from 1941 to 1960. Prices slipped lower and there were few buyers. Bucking this trend were the 1941-S, 1942-D and 1950-S each with a gain of one dollar per roll.

Jefferson nickels saw a number of substantial price changes as the keys and semi keys all suffered from investor disinterest. Six issues lost five dollars per roll or more. No nickel issue was able to boast of a gain.

Roosevelt dimes were much quieter than usual this week with very few completed transactions. No price changes of any consequence were observed. And fewer issues were traded than in any of the past five weeks. The 1955-D appeared to be one of the volume leaders and it is resisting decline quite well. Many offers to sell the 1955-P were noted and the price of that issue seems to be slipping.

Quarters; we say the same thing about them each week: no volume; few price changes; few bids. The 1956-D edged upward on the surge of a few small sales. The key 1955-D is still seeking a level somewhere in the low one hundred and thirties, and is the volume leader of the series if there is such a thing. Offers to sell the late date issues met with little acceptance.

A couple of bright lights appeared in the Franklin half dollars during the past several days. The 1949-S is now back in favor and is sporting a five dollar gain. The 1952-D reversed itself and posted a one dollar advance. Most of the other issues slipped to some extent though there were no large losses.

Dollar volume was at a low ebb this week as only a few of the many issues were requested. The 1889-O and the 1891-O each marked up a good increase in bid price but these gains were offset by $20 plus declines suffered by the 1883-CC and the 1889-S. Bag lot sales were off as everyone waited to see how the price of silver would react to the new coinage laws.

Some bidding appeared on the tapes for early date proof sets and a wave of buying was felt throughout the series. Prices seemed inclined to stay at prior weeks' levels, however, and 1954 and 1964 sets were the only late dates to show an advance.

A small selloff hit the circulated Washington quarters and bid prices on a number of issues moved to lower ground. The rest of the circulated market was only slightly lower and continues to withstand the market decline better than the uncirculated rolls.

The Canadian 1965 proof like sets are now bid at below issue price in some instances and the ask price is lower by the week. It will take a heavy buying effort by dealers and investors to get these sets moving as the Canadian government continues to grind them out. There will probably not be a major price move on these sets until the Canadians announce the closing of order acceptance.

The Market Opinion

Each week we note more and more messages on tape asking for choice uncirculated and proof coins of the earlier issues. The Barber series is quite popular at this time and these coins are going into the portfolios of wise investors just as late date rolls did in 1963. There can be no such thing as a selloff in these issues because there just aren't enough of the coins to go around.

Much care must be taken in purchasing these issues. Hairlines and scratches which appear inconsequential to the casual viewer can remove as much as 50 per cent of a coin's worth. It is easy to buy hairlined coins but it is extremely hard to sell them.

Don't be oversold on a coin if it has an excess of toning. While this is still important to many purchasers, it is a trap for the unwary because the toning can conceal blemishes. Use extreme caution in buying toned coins.

Daumier

"Well, 75 cents and 50 cents," I admitted. But that's a big difference from the prices of today."

"Not too much," he said. "All old and good things increase in value. It's merely the law of supply and demand."

"There are only so many old prints. There are only so many rare books and autographs. It isn't as if I were selling ties. If I sold my stock of ties, I could order another shipment of ties."

Prints Grow Scarce

"But the supply of my product becomes more scarce every day, with more and more private collectors and institutional collectors taking out of circulation books and autographs and prints. And then there are those who are not collectors but who buy prints for decorative purposes, for the home or the office."

Mr. Schatzki is tall, slender, erect and white-haired. He has been selling prints, autographs and rare books for 45 years. He came to this country in 1938 from Germany, after 18 years of experience in this same field there.

"So you can see," he added, "that prices must go up and can only go up because there are fewer and fewer prints on the market and there are more and more people who want them."

I did not discuss buying old prints or rare books and autographs for financial appreciation purposes because it is pretty obvious that this is an excellent field for those who want to acquire something of beauty that can be used for decorative purposes and at the same time increase in value.

Hogarth Prints

Along these same lines is a similar experience I had. About ten years ago in Chicago I walked through a Woolworth store on State Street in the downtown area. A little gnome of a man had a booth on one of the aisles against the north wall. With a pair of scissors he cut out silhouettes of customers' profiles and pasted these black outlines on white cardboard.

This wasn't of interest to me, but there was a single Hogarth engraving pinned to the side of his small booth. When the dried up little man stopped between customers, I asked if the Hogarth was for sale.

"If you're interested in Hogarths," he said, "I've a big bunch of them at home and I'll bring them here tomorrow. I bought them about 50 years ago and I have no use for them."

I went back the next morning and bought three sets, one of "The Rake's Progress," one "The Harlot's Progress" and the other of "Marriage A La Mode," probably the three best known of this English engraver's fine works. They were early printings. I paid $10 for each set.

Supply Gone

When I was again in Chicago about three months later, I went back to Woolworth's but couldn't find the man. The only word that I could get about him was that he had quit and had moved to Florida. So I couldn't get any more, but last Saturday in Schatzki's, I was curious about their current value.

He brought out a portfolio of Hogarths. He had some single prints and only one complete set, which he had priced at $200. I asked him about my three sets.

"Early printings of those sets should sell for between $200 and $250," he explained. "And you can easily tell if an engraving is made from the plate early in the plate's life or later. The first prints off an engraving plate are clear, with every detail sharply defined. As more and more prints are made, the prints become less clearly defined. The plate eventually starts to wear out and the prints become muddy. Then sometimes their engraver is brought in to try to sharpen up the engraving. But this can be detected, too."

The important point here is not the artistic evaluation but the economic evaluation of these two small purchases.

Both the Daumier prints and the Hogarth prints were bought because they were basically fine looking prints and were to be used for decorative purposes. But both had increased in value 20 times. The Daumier prints, of which there are many, took 20 years to achieve their increase in value. The Hogarths took 10 years.

This is a field of financial appreciation that should not be overlooked. As Mr. Schatzki said, "The prices have no place else to go but up."

converted into tons, as follows: Aluminum and Copper, one lot equals 25 tons; Lead and Zinc, one lot equals 30 tons; Tin, one lot equals five tons and Silver, one lot equals 10,000 ounces.

Columns 5 and 6, "Open, Bid Ask," lists the buyer's and seller's prices at the start of the trading session.

Columns 7 and 8, "Sales, High Low," shows the prices for the highest and the lowest sales for the day.

Columns 9 and 10, "Closing, Bid Ask," records buyer's and seller's prices at the close of the trading session. If a sale is made at the close then "T" (traded) is added to the closing bid price. If there is no asking price then "B" (bid) is added to the bid price and vice versa. If there is no closing quotation (on the Commodity Exchange) the quotation committee establishes an approximate value, a level which they believe to be a fair price, but only nominal. Here "N" (nominal) is added to the closing bid.

Column 11, "Previous Bid," lists the closing buyer's price for that position at the end of the trading session of the previous day.

Column 12, "Open Interest," shows the number of contracts outstanding in each month's position at the close of trading on the day earlier.

ed copper needs would be filled from "excesses" in the Government's metals stockpile.

Over the past five years, the OEP has sold about 210,000,000 pounds of copper to the Mint from the Defense Production Act stockpile.

The Treasury's use of copper would nearly double upon approval of the new coins.

Another company, the Unlimited Numismatic Exchange, has joined the ranks of those serving the coin dealer. As the name implies, the service offered will be similar to that of a teletype firm, but with a twist. The new company offers a vocal inter-com system similar to a room to room inter-com — on a national basis.

Mr. Todd Haney, President of Unlimited Numismatic Exchange, says that, "After much experience and extensive study, I know that this is the answer to a lasting communication service which is profitable for everyone."
